Ascension Lutheran Day School To Occupy New Building Monday

Another step in the fulfillment of the long range educational program of Ascension Lutheran Church will be taken Monday when six kindergarten pupils and their teacher, Mrs. Paul Kasten, move into their classroom in the new education building.

Built at a cost of $40,000 the modern brick building will supply badly needed facilities for Sunday School pupils, youth groups, and organizational meetings. Consisting of three large classrooms, the building will accommodate about 100 students on a day school basis.

The Christian Day School was started in September of 1960, with a kindergarten class of seven students. Classes were held in the parish hall of the church while awaiting completion of the present facilities.
