they drive cars and Daddy did not obey the law so he must go to jail.

A jail sentence is a matter of public record. Protect your son against being hurt later by arming him with the truth now.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a high school graduate, 19, good-looking but not beautiful.

My mother has been divorced three times and considers herself an authority on marriage. According to her, love is a lot of hokum. Her theme song: "I married for love three times and it ruined my life."

One of the owners of the store where Mom works is very fond of me. I've dated him a few times because Mom insisted. He's a nice person but certainly not a man I could get excited over. He's 41, and a bachelor.

Mom says he's a catch and if I pass him up I'm crazy. If there's no such thing as love I may as well have some of the nice things in life that money can buy. Your practical advice would be greatly appreciated.—MOONGLOW

Dear Moon: If you wanted advice on how to bake a beautiful cake would you go to someone who is famous for flops?

If your mother would count this man's years instead of his bankroll she'd discover he's old enough to be your father. He's undoubtedly closer to HER age than yours. If he's such a catch suggest she catch him for herself.

Dear Ann: I am going (or I should say WAS going) steady with a big wheel at school. We are both 17.

Last week was my birthday. I had a party at my house and most of the kids brought gag gifts. My steady gave me a beautiful beaded evening bag which must have cost at least $35 according to my mother. I was knocked out of my mind.

This afternoon my mother told me that my boy friend's mother phoned and asked if I had received an evening bag from her son. Mom said yes and added it was a pretty expensive gift from a young kid. His mother replied, "Indeed it is. My husband gave it to me for my anniversary and I'd like it back." Mom got on the bus and returned it within the hour.

What should my attitude be toward the fellow? My folks are boiling.—STUNNED

Dear Stunned: Find other friends—and fast.
