YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

"Go Where the Grapes Grow"

Dear Ann Landers: It's none of my business but I'd like to ask you a question. Recently you advised a young wife to "go where the grapes grow." She had an ambitious husband who kept getting promoted and transferred and she was sick and tired of moving around the country. You said it's the wife's duty to go with her husband wherever he can do a little better.

It's mighty easy for you to hand out high-sounding advice, sitting there in Chicago, Ann, but I wonder how much moving around YOU have done? —JUST ASKING

Dear Just Asking: You don't have to be a cow to know what milk is—but it just so happens that I've had some experience along these lines.

In 21 years of marriage we moved from Sioux City, Iowa to St. Louis, back to Sioux City, to Little Rock, to New Orleans, to Milwaukee, to Los Angeles, to Chicago, to Eau Claire, Wisconsin and nine years later back to Chicago. Any more questions?

Dear Ann Landers: My father died leaving two teenage boys. The oldest one is living with us. He works and sends almost all his money home to Mom. The younger boy just graduated from high school and has lined up a job in this town, too, which means he'll also be living with us soon.

We have two youngsters and are having a tough time making ends meet. I've asked my mother to come live with us because it would be much easier than sending her money every month to keep her house up.

The trouble is my sister wants her, too. She likes to sleep late and run around a lot. When Mom visits her it's like she is a maid and housekeeper for the four kids. My sister's husband makes twice as much money as mine, but they don't send Mom a dime.

My brother-in-law is eager to have Mom because he wants a big breakfast and never gets it unless Mom is there.

I say if my sister wants Mom she should take the boys, too. She says since she has four kids and I have only two, it's unfair of me to expect her to take them. What is your opinion?—TAMARA

Dear Tamara: If your sister wants a maid (I mean your mother) she should take the brothers, too. If she refuses to take the boys, your mother should stay with you since you are willing to take everybody.

Dear Ann: You are a fake. (Continued on Page 14)
