

Class Holds Own Demo, GOP Meeting

While Democrats and Republicans are getting ready to name their candidates for the presidency, members of Miss Darlene Rodecker's class at Arlington Elementary School, Torrance, are also holding their own conventions.

As part of their social studies work, the sixth and seventh graders are studying American government. Since this is an election year, they are going to learn how government works by imitating it.

The class Democratic Convention took place this week, concurrently with the real thing going on at the LA Sports Arena. The convention nominated Stu Symington and Kennedy and Stevenson tied for second. Lyndon Johnson received two votes.

The class will hold their own Republican convention when the real GOP gathers in Chicago for their confab.

Their debates are scheduled to take place in front of large bulletin boards depicting the leading figures of each political party. The class is doing research on platforms and leading personalities of each party. Their spelling words come from terms associated with politics.

Two of the class members, Cheryl Morris and Kathy Vess, won tickets to the convention through their Girl Scout troop and will take pad and pencil to the Sports Arena when they attend. They will give the class a first-hand report and will write the event for the school paper.

MOCK CONVENTION . . . Students in Miss Darlene Rodecker's class at Arlington Elementary held their own convention this week in conjunction with their studies of the Federal Government. Winner was Stu Symington (Patricia Kurashige). Other candidates were Donald Oldt, Jesse Norfleet, and Cheryl Morris.

TO CHICAGO . . . Candidates Charles Brown, Cal Carman, Cynthia Blood, and Tina Smith get ready for the Republican convention in Chicago. Students are part of Arlington Elementary class who are studying government by imitating the conventions and elections.
