National Supply Wins Coveted 'Iron Man'

In recognition of National Supply Company's perfect safety record covering 869 days of 3,629,172 man hours, officials of the local plant Wednesday evening received the Armo "Iron Man" award at a dinner meeting attended by 100 at the Plush Horse restaurant.

Company and union officials heard praise for their outstanding record from spokesman for the local plant which is a subsidiary of Armo Steel Corporation.

E. G. Unrath, vice president of The National Supply Company, presented the award which was received by J. D. Spalding, works manager of the Torrance plant on behalf of the plant's employees. Campbell M. Allen, chief safety engineer of Armo Steel Corporation, discussed the Armosafety program. OTHER participants included R. S. Gruver, administrative vice president, personal and public relations; William Varit director of organization and planning of Armo, and George B. Cushing, vice president — public relations and advertising, of National Supply. Members of the plant safety committee and Union representatives were among the special guests.

A feature of the meeting also was the installation of new officers of the company's Management Club.

The Armo "Iron Man" is a bronze figure created by Clement J. Barnhorn, internationally known sculptor, following a number of visits to Armo's main plant at Middletown, Ohio, in 1925. The figure represents a composite of the facial features, build, and clothing of many of the workers that Barnhorn saw at that time. More than 3 feet high, it stands on a 5-foot base.

SINCE 1926, the trophy has been awarded annually for the best safety record at an Armo Steel Corporation plant. Following the merger of The National Supply Company with Armo in 1958, National Supply plants became eligible to compete in 1959. Perfect safety records were made by the National Supply plants at Etna, Pa. and Torrance, both working more than a million man-hours without a single lost-time injury. The Etna plant had the award for the first half of 1960 and Torrance will have it for the remainder of the year. The Torrance plant's perfect safety record began in January, 1958 and is the best ever attained by a National Supply plant, and is the second best of all Armo plants.

HAWAIIAN READERS . . . America's 50th state, Hawaii, is a subject of current interest in James Haywood's fourth, fifth and sixth grade class at Adams Elementary School, Torrance. Here, youngsters point to the tiki heads on the wall, showing how many books they have read during the summer. Shown are Barbara Corey, Linda Keller, Phillip Irons, and Tim McNamara.

ALASKAN STUDIES . . . Tom Browns sixth, seventh, and eighth grade class at Adams Elementary School, Torrance, is learning about America's 49th state as part of social studies. The whole room decor is about Alaska. Here, Bynn Barenz, Brown, and Michael Betz put the finishing touches on a totem pole, with Alaskan masks in the foreground.

Summer Students Study New States In Books

Visitors from America's two newest states would feel right at home at Adams Elementary School, Torrance, during summer school.

Sixth, seventh, and eighth graders in Tom Brown's class are learning about Alaska, the 49th State, and have redecorated their room to match their studies. Next door, James Haywood's fourth, fifth, and sixth graders are getting the lowdown on the 50th state, Hawaii.

BOTH ROOMS have done considerable research on their respective states and have used authentic decorations for the classroom. Both are using symbols of their states in a race to see who can read the most books during summer school.

Brown's Alaskans are having a race of polar bears and seals in the book reading contest, while small tiki heads are added to the wall for each book read by a class member in Haywood's Hawaiian classroom. Expressions on the faces of the tiki heads indicate the type of book read.

ART ACTIVITIES include making of authentic Alaskan and Hawaiian masks. The learn how to make the masks. The Alaskans were guided in the mask-making by the knowledge that totems do not have eyebrows and ears, for instance.

To wind up the class studies, the Hawaiians are planning an authentic luau, while the Alaskans will have a "walrus" feed, with real Alaskan dishes.
