The American Way

Where, oh where in all this world do men have the freedom of expression as in these United States of America?

This week, while we have a breather between the conventions of our two great political parties, let's take a sharp look at the obligations of a people blessed with freedom of expression.

We've made these obligations into a set of rules (if that's possible). Save them, remember them.

I. KEEP INFORMED!
 Read newspapers and magazines. Listen to discussions and debates on radio and TV. Then—form your own opinions.

II. STUDY THE CANDIDATES
 Look up their records. See what they stand for, and whether they have lived up to their promises.

III. PARTICIPATE!
 Attend precinct caucuses and political meetings. Make your voice heard in the selection of candidates and the formation of policy.

IV. OFFER YOUR SERVICES
 Do essential chores and "leg work" in some pre-election job of your own choosing.

V. ENCOURAGE THOSE WITH CHARACTER
 Encourage men with character and competence to dedicate themselves to careers in public service. Your government will never be any better than the men in it!

VI. ALWAYS EXPRESS YOUR PREFERENCE
 Even if your choice is limited to candidates who are not ideal, you should choose the best of the men offered.

VII. STIMULATE OTHERS TO VOTE
 (Within the limits prescribed by your state laws). Explain to others where and when to register and vote.

VIII. CONSIDER IT A MORAL OBLIGATION TO VOTE!
 If we do not all use this, our most precious of privileges, we are likely to lose it!

See you next week.
