

YOUR PROBLEMS

"Compounding The Felony..."

Dear Ann Landers: I am one of those "nosey" women who frequently opens medicine cabinets when I'm visiting. In defense of myself as well as other women, I would like to say it has nothing to do with my nose outside the fact that I am merely looking for something to put on it.

How many women remember to take their purses into the bathroom? Darned few I'll bet. I NEVER do. When I look at myself in the mirror I invariably see that my hair could use combing and my nose needs powder. The natural thing is to scout around for implements to do the repair job.

I couldn't for the life of me tell you what else is in the cabinet. Apologize, please. — NO SNOOP

Dear No Snoop: Sorry, but in my book you are compounding the felony. A hostess who wishes to supply her guests with implements for a repair job will leave them out in plain sight.

When you must look in the medicine cabinet for the tools it's reasonable to assume they are not intended for your use.

May I humbly suggest you cultivate the habit of taking your purse into the bathroom?

Dear Ann Landers: What would you do if you were planning to graduate in June and one crummy teacher gave you a flunk and you had to go to summer school in order to get that one lousy credit?

Well, it happened to me and I want to tell you it was horrible. Not only did I miss out on the graduation exercises with all my friends, but I had all my announcements printed up and couldn't send them out.

What I want to know is this: After I get that one credit in summer school, shall I send out the announcements to my friends and relatives and write: "Graduated in summer school." I don't want gifts, I just want them to know I graduated. — BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

Dear Late: Sorry, but in this case I think "Never is better than late." Sending out announcements under these circumstances would appear to be an open pitch for gifts, even though you don't mean it that way.

Too bad you missed out on graduating with your pals, but this is an example of how important one lousy credit can be.

Dear Ann Landers: I've only been married three years and my husband and I are paying on a home, a car and some doctor bills.

My two brothers are much better off financially than my husband is. They are putting me in a very uncomfortable position and I need help because I don't know the right thing to do.

Our father passed away recently. A man came over to see us about buying a stone for Papa's grave. He showed us some pictures and made some suggestions. He was a nice man and didn't try to pressure us into anything.

My brothers agreed on the most expensive stone in the book. I said nothing. Then Vern, the oldest brother, turned to my husband and said, "Of course we'll split the cost three ways."

When we got home my husband told me how much our share would be. I was shocked. We can't afford this expense, Ann. I treated my father with great respect and loved him dearly when he was alive. I think THIS is what counts, and not an expensive stone. What do you say? Please tell me what to do. — ONLY DAUGHTER

Dear Daughter: Give your father a check for an amount he can afford and tell him it is the best you can do.

If alcohol is robbing you or someone you love of health and dignity, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)
