Vandalism Shows Marked Decrease in City Schools

Vandalism in the Torrance schools has shown a marked decrease during the past year, according to school officials. The credit for lowering this cost from over $25,000 to less than $5000, according to Superintendent J. H. Hull, should go to the parents, students, principals, and teachers.

"When all of these people feel they belong to the schools and the schools belong to them, damage to property is low," he stated.

At the beginning of school last fall a campaign to respect public and private property was waged by teachers and students alike. They were guided by a survey from the U. S. Office of Education which showed the causes of vandalism to be poor leadership and supervision both at home and at school and a "couldn't-care-less" attitude.

Special effort was then made to improve the relationships among students, school staffs and parents. The subjects were more closely tuned to the students' changing needs and a program of more cooperation and communication between the community and schools was started.

Commenting on the drop in vandalism, S. E. Waldrip, Assistant Superintendent - Business added, "This $20,000 savings to taxpayers shows what can be done when all groups combine forces to attack a problem."

Cactus Club Meets Friday

John Dooca, of Bakemasters Bakeries, South Bay Shopping Center, will be guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Metropolitan Cactus & Succulent society, 15628 Hawthorne Blvd., July 14, at 8 p.m.

Dooca, a specialist in cake decorating and moulding animals from bread dough, has received several awards for his artistic work. A demonstration in moulding turtles, alligators and crocodiles from bread dough will be given.
