

Agricultural Workers Will Get Unemployment Insurance in Fall

Some 500 farmer-employers in the southern part of Los Angeles County, as well as many other employers of agricultural labor served by the Long Beach Audit District Office of the Department of Employment will be affected by a 1961 amendment to the California Unemployment Insurance Code (Assembly Bill 1633) which extends disability insurance and hospital benefit coverage to agricultural workers.

W. P. Nebergall, departmental auditor in charge, said he will be glad to provide detailed information for individual farmers on request to assist them in determining their status under the new law. Department of Employment headquarters in Sacramento will send registration forms and instruction to about 35,000 employers of agricultural labor who will be identified by federal records available to the state. Auditor Nebergall requested, therefore, that farmers wait until after Sept. 1 before contacting him.

"We here in Long Beach have no way of knowing now which local agricultural employers will be sent registration form automatically by Sacramento. In any case, we know that a number of such employers will not be among the 35,000. So we suggest that any agricultural employers who have not received registration forms direct from Sacramento by Sept. 1, contact the local audit district office. The address is 1315 Pine Ave., Long Beach, and the telephone number is HE 7-0171.
