by Ann Landers

"Tell Him To Grow Up..."

Dear Ann Landers: I have a problem which I've never seen in your column. Furthermore I've never heard of anyone who has this kind of trouble.

My husband insists that I leave the door of our apartment open between 5:30 and 6:00 in the evening when he is expected home for dinner. He just hates to dig around for his key. I should tell you that he usually carries a brief case and some books so I concede it may be a bit of a nuisance.

I've offered to unlock the door immediately if he will only knock, whistle or ring, but this isn't enough! He can't stand to wait. We want the door to be open so he can walk right in.

Yesterday he got so mad he yelled loud enough for the neighbors to hear "If this door isn't open tomorrow I'm going to kick it down!" What do you suggest? — BROWBEATEN

Dear Brow: Of course it would be more convenient if the door were open so he could walk right in. It would be even more convenient if there were no door at all. But a grown man should have sense enough to realize that if HE could walk in, so could any vagrant, thief or lunatic.

Tell him to grow up. A major symptom of infantile behavior is the inability to defer to others. The inconvenience of using his key is a trifle compared with what he stands to lose by insisting that you leave the door open.

Dear Ann Landers: My 10-year-old daughter was behaving badly in a department store yesterday. She was running up and down the aisles, pulling dresses off the hangers and opening stock drawers. I told her repeatedly to stop it. She'd say "O.K., Mommy," and two minutes later she'd do something else.

When my back was turned she climbed on a table and stuck her hand in a bird cage. This was the limit so I gave her a swat on the behind. She bawled for a minute and then behaved perfectly.

A close friend who was with me criticized me for spanking the child in public. She said only low class people do this and I should have waited until we got home. Do you agree?—CRITICIZED

Dear Criticized: The most effective punishment is the kind handed out on the spot.

Time takes on strange dimensions to youngsters. An hour can seem like a week. (Continued on Page 28)
