Planning to surprise some one with a delightful photo-portrait of your youngster this Christmas? Before you go to the photographer's studio, be sure to follow these helpful rules for the best results.

Arrange to have your child's picture taken early in the morning, or right after his nap.
Be sure to give him a snack at home before the sitting, as the slightest hunger pangs may make him restless.

Little girls shouldn't be dressed in ruffles and flounces, as they will only distract from what should be the focal point of the picture, the child herself. Avoid tight curls on your little girl. Little boys should avoid slicked-down hair styles. The camera tends to make such hair styles look too extreme.

DON'T FRIGHTEN or excite your child by stressing the importance of his role. Keep calm and quiet when you get to the studio, and chances are your youngster will follow suit.

Let the photographer take over from there... he has the experience necessary to set your child at ease. Above all, don't try to pose the child.
Your photographer knows what he wants and he knows the best way to achieve it.

Frozen Food In Vending Machine Next

Soon housewives, as well as the husbands they send to shop, will be able to buy frozen food from an "automatic salesman," according to officials of Grocerette Vending Machines, Inc., of Long Beach.
"This represents the newest innovation in the fast-developing field of mechanical marketing," stated President Jay Sullivan, in describing the new capabilities of the food vending machine. Previous Grocer-ette models included a refrigerated as well as non-refrigerated unit, both 76 inches high by 53 inches wide by 33 inches deep.

The temperature of the refrigerated Grocerette varies from 33 to 38 degrees Fahrenheit, while the "Frozen Food" model's temperature maintains a consistent zero degrees, eliminating the icing problem common to many frozen food machines. All Grocerettes offer up to 10 different selections of staples or other items.
The machine's capacity is indicated by the fact that, equipped with four shelves, it can hold and vend up to 144 half-gallons of ice cream.

"The public gets the credit for opening our eyes to the versatility of the machine," said Sullivan. "The Grocerette was first introduced in Long Beach over a year ago and met with immediate acceptance, proving that people like to buy things this way. Now — with the new Frozen Food model — they'll be able to buy cuts of meat, frozen desserts and so forth, round the clock at convenient locations
... without waiting problems or waiting in line."

Leaders in the grocery and dairy industries — as well as in vending — confirm that the revolution in the nation's shopping habits will be accelerated by the new "family" of automatic venders — Grocer-ette.
