

YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

'Who Gets Taken Home First? . . .'

Dear Ann Landers: From time is coming up so please settle something for a bunch of teenagers who can't agree on a very important matter.

When a guy has a car and invites a buddy or two to double or triple date who gets picked up first and who gets taken home first? This bugs the girls, especially, because nobody wants to be taken home first. They consider it some sort of an insult.

You can't imagine how much trouble we've been having over this problem. Please print in your column exactly how it should be done. We will accept your word as law. —TOOTH AND TOENAIL

Dear Toenail: When all the kids live in the same part of town, it's simple. When they are scattered it can become a problem.

It's sensible to pick up and drop off kids in a logical manner — which means cutting down on mileage wherever possible.

One rule must be observed, however, regardless of distance. Every fellow must pick up and take his own date home.

Roughly it goes like this: The fellows are picked up first, then the driver's date, then the next closest gal, then the third gal.

On taking kids home: The gal who lives the furthest from the scene of the prom gets dropped first, next her date, then the second gal and next her date.

The driver drops off his date last. This is one of the rewards for having wheels.

Dear Ann: I just read the letter from "Tired." She was well-rested compared with me. You said her husband should give her a hand by bathing the kids, helping with the dishes, etc. Yeah? Did you ever try to get a lazy bum off his back porch and loose from a can of beer?

I've been married 19 years to the same type and when I look back at how foolish I was I could kick myself. For a stretch of several years, I started my day at 3:00 a.m. —took my husband to work, came home, woke up, fed and dressed two children and drove them to the baby-sitters. I had to be at my job by 7:30 a.m.

I finished work at noon. My beloved was off at 2:00 p.m. He'd come home and get the car, go off to a bar and that's where HIS paycheck went. I had every Sun. (Continued on Page 11)

For Medical Research

Check Presented By Las Vecinas

Pasadena Foundation for Medical Research has received a $1,500 gift from the Las Vecinas Women's Club of Hollywood Riviera for the purchase of scientific equipment that will be used in the Foundation's program of cancer research.

Mrs. John V. Woods, president of the Women's Club, presented the check to F. Edward Little, president of the Foundation, at a meeting of the board of directors.

The new equipment, a microtome-cryostat, will be used in metabolism studies of potential new anti-cancer compounds, according to Dr. George S. Sharp, medical director.

Sharp said that Las Vecinas had "generously expanded" the connotation of its name, "The Neighbors," when it became interested in the cancer research program of the Pasadena group through reports of one of its members, Mrs. Lee Flanagan of Redondo Beach, who is also a member of the Associates of the Pasadena Foundation for Medical Research.
