

Epilepsy to Be Subject In Churches

"Epilepsy Sabbath" will be observed this weekend in churches and temples throughout Los Angeles County when ministers, priests, and rabbis will explain to congregations some of the common misconceptions which exist about this neurological disorder.

According to Mrs. Dorothy Corey, chairman of the July fund-raising drive of the Los Angeles County Epilepsy Society, there are some 63,000 epileptic individuals in the county who are victims of economic and social rejection because of the clouds of ignorance and prejudice which still surround this ancient ailment.

"Actually the future is brighter today for epilepsy sufferers than ever before," Mrs. Corey said. "This is because seizure-control is possible through the many recently developed anti-convulsant drugs, all of which were unknown prior to World War II.

"With this medical control, many epileptic persons are immediately employable and can lead completely normal lives. They can go on to realize their full potentials as productive, happy citizens."

Mrs. Corey added that "Epilepsy Sabbath" will do much toward achieving better public attitudes with regard to the rehabilitation of epilepsy patients.

Tryouts Set For Children In Chapel Play

Chapel Theatre has announced tryouts for the role of the child in "The Miracle Worker," the story of Helen Keller as a child, will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. and Monday at 7 p.m.

The play, to be directed by Don Gish, is slated to open at the Chapel Theatre in September. Gish has announced that he will select the child to play the lead role before casting for the general cast because of the difficulty of the role.

Parents who are interested in having their children tryout for the role are asked to bring them to the theater at either of the tryout times. It is also suggested that interested children see the movie, "The Miracle Worker," and study some of the ways of the blind.

There are no speaking parts, and pantomime is the most important part of the role. Other children's roles are also available.
