

Law in Action

Jones, 33, would get worked up about his children, his home, his car, or his job. Now he was worried about his job. In November as a supervising mechanic he got blamed for allowing a plane to become unsafe. It had to be grounded, and his superior said he'd fire him unless he got the plane fixed in two months.

After two months, the work was still undone. Jones became further upset at a subcontractor's big repair bill. For three luckless days he tried to get the subcontractor to cut the bill.

AFTER the third day he went home to relax. While resting beside his swimming pool, he had a fatal heart attack. His widow claimed workmen's compensation benefits. Doctors said the emotional stress of his work brought on the heart attack and the Industrial Accident Commission granted the award. His attack arose out of his work.

The law calls on employers to carry insurance for workers who get an industrial injury, an accident "on the job," or "arising out of employment."

THERE are certain occupational diseases: Silicosis from working in a dusty place, bronchial problems from working in damp places, or back injuries from heavy lifting.

Of late our courts have recognized in certain circumstances that heart attacks, ulcers and emotional distress can also "arise" out of employment and are hence compensable. To make such a claim the worker or his family must show that the injury arose out of the employment. Otherwise the court will deny any benefits.

Program for Area Scouts Set Tuesday

"New Concepts in Exploring" will be discussed by a panel of six professional men Tuesday evening at the annual Roundtable Dinner of the South Bay District, Boy Scouts of America.

The program get under way at 8 p.m., preceded by a 7 o'clock dinner, at Aviation High School in Redondo Beach. Scouting units of El Segundo, Hermosa Beach, Manhattan Beach, the Palos Verdes Peninsula, Redondo Beach, Torrance, Inglewood and San Pedro will be represented, according to Thomas V. Elder, district commissioner.

ELDER, a senior engineer for Pacific Telephone, will deliver the opening address and will introduce the outstanding panelists.

Master of ceremonies will be Earl France, scoutmaster of Troop 780, Manhattan Beach. Others coordinating the program include Eugene Northway of Redondo Beach, district scouting executive; Rex Brown of Manhattan Beach, assistant district commissioner, and Bill Huckabee of Redondo Beach, scouting field executive.

Although the panel discussion will focus on Explorer Scouts, who are ages 14 through 18, Cub Scout leaders also will be on hand to gather valuable information on the premise that there is nothing good or decent that boys want to do that men aren't doing or willing to share.

Cmdr. Tomie L. Trotter, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester L. Trotter, 21318 S. Western Ave., is serving with the Air Anti-Submarine Squadron 891 at the Naval Air Station, Seattle, Wash.

The reserve squadron has been on active duty since Oct. 1 of last year.
