

Telephone Employees Win Kudos

A plaque signifying outstanding participation in the AID-United Givers program by Southern California employees of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. was presented recently to James S. Cantlen, vice president of the company by Charles Fleishman, AID president.

The award went specifically to the nearly 32,000 Pacific Telephone employees who are members of AID and it marked completion of a decade of their giving through AID.

Pacific Telephone employees increased their contributions through AID by $80,000. The total pledged in the recent 1962-63 campaign was over $814,000.

It was pointed out by Fleishman at the time of the presentation that the majority of Pacific Telephone employees give at least the suggested standard of 12 minutes of each week's work to AID causes.

AID, established in 1961, is an association of givers including employed men and women, firms, corporations, and professional associations. There are approximately 350,000 individual and 2,200 corporate members.

Type III Sabin Clinics Open Last Time Today

Residents of Los Angeles County today will have their last chance to take Type III Sabin oral polio vaccine in the massive three-stage immunization campaign in public clinics held throughout the area.

Los Angeles County Medical Assn., sponsoring the greatest public health project in the Southland's history, noted that the final vaccine against the killer-crippler disease has been recommended for every man, woman and child in this potentially epidemic area.

Those urging complete community participation include the United States surgeon-general, city and county health officers, and Dr. Malcolm Merrill, head of the state public health department, who has warned that polio last year climbed 40 per cent in this area while declining in the rest of California.

Dr. Reginald H. Smart, chairman of the LACMA public health committee, pointed out that more than 15 million doses of Sabin Type III vaccine have been given effectively in this nation and millions more in other countries.

It should be taken even by those who have had Salk shots, for extra protection and to keep the individual from being a carrier, which Salk does not.

Punishment or Treatment Crime Council Subject

Vindictive reactions to crime, deep seated as they have been in America, are changing rapidly and the new corrections pattern will be based on social dangerousness, deterrability and treatability of those who break the law.

So said Milton G. Rector, former probation district director now executive director of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, New York, when he addressed the third annual Institute on Corrections at his alma mater, the University of Southern California, recently.

SPEAKING before 200 corrections personnel on the subject "Corrections: Punishment or Treatment?" Rector declared there is a question as to whether the public thirst for vengeance is a voracious as often assumed.

"Public opinion during the past centuries has been less retributive than the law itself," he said. "It was public opinion which forced the law to become more humane—to abandon capital punishment for scores of minor offenses, to recognize mitigating circumstances, to treat juveniles differently from adults. Jurists today have largely abolished capital punishment in practice, even though it remains on the law books of all but nine states."

"Today, efforts at reform are aimed primarily at the prisoner's social and psychological readjustment," Rector pointed out. "The essence of the 'new approach' is personified in the professionally trained probation and parole officer," said Rector. "The principal objective is to change a person's attitude, help him cope with circumstances, gain an insight into his motivations, reorient his feelings, and achieve a measure of self-control."

THE NEW approach has extended beyond probation and parole service, the speaker observed. "The sentences of judges, too, are tending to reflect, not so much indignation and hostility towards a criminal as an attempt to diagnose his personality and prescribe for his needs."

This new attitude, Rector said, is "motivated by a growing humanitarianism, a belief in the worth and dignity of every human being and a willingness to expend effort to reclaim him for his own sake and not merely to keep him from harming us."

"With understanding, people will change their old, emotional reactions to crime," Rector told his USC audience. "As we come to understand the motivations which lie behind the way criminals behave as well as the motivations that are behind the way we behave toward criminals, we will be able to supplant an emotionally colored, illogical and inconsistent aggregation of criminal sanctions with a systematic correctional policy soundly based on social dangerousness, deterrability, and treatability."

RECTOR was the keynote for the two-day Corrections Institute sponsored by USC's School of Social Work and Extension Division, with cooperation from the California Probation, Parole and Correctional Assn., Southern Region; the State Department of Corrections; Youth Authority and the Los Angeles County Probation Department.

Featured with Rector on the program, is Mrs. Virginia Satir of the Mental Research Institute, Palo Alto, who is to present Family Interviewing demonstrations both days.

Mrs. Satir, director of training for the Palo Alto Institute's Family Project, is a graduate of Wisconsin State University, who earned her master's degree at the University of Chicago's School of Social Service Administration.

A former teacher, Mrs. Satir has been in social work since 1942.

The regular meeting of the Torrance City Council held on Tuesday was adjourned on Wednesday, Feb. 13, 1963, at 8 p.m., in the City Council Chambers, City Hall, 3031 Torrance Blvd.

WELCOME ABOARD . . . Robert McCabe, right, graduate student at the University of Texas is greeted by Stuart E. Marsee, president of El Camino College. McCabe is making a study of administrative procedures of junior colleges as part of Kellogg leadership program.

El Camino Impresses Texas Viewer

Robert McCabe, grauate student at the University of Texas, is spending a three-week period on the campus of El Camino College as an observer in the administrative-intern phase of the Kellogg leadership program.

Designed to prepare leadership personnel for community college work, the Kellogg program is a national administered fund for the use of graduate students of education.

McCABE'S investigation will take him through most phases of the El Camino administrative division.

To date, he has found the organization of student activity work particularly helpful. "I spent a seminar weekend with your student government members while they discussed the problems of their association in working with the administration and it was quite a weekend!" McCabe said.

Vitality is another aspect of El Camino that impressed McCabe. "Everyone on the campus seems to have purpose.

The students and faculty move with a determination. It's a very exciting campus to visit," he added.

PART OF McCabe's work will be to gather information pertinent to his doctoral dissertation on the faculty influence of curriculum in a community college.

He will join assistant director meetings as well as the general curriculum meetings composed of faculty and administrators.
