Data Processing Classes Will Be Offered

More than 20 courses in business data processing and computer science will be offered by the University of California Business Administration Extension this fall. Area classes will be conducted at North High School.

The program has been designed to give all persons concerned with data processing a complete program. It is also set up to help candidates for the certificate of data processing examinations.

Classes are slated to begin at North High School on Sept. 16, according to University Extension officials. In addition to the North High offerings, courses will also be taught at the UCLA campus, in El Segundo and in Buena Park.

The instructional staff will include experts in the field from industry. IBM, Douglas, North American Aircraft, the Rand Corp., Space Technology Laboratories, Aerospace, and Nortronics will participate in the program.

A former patrolman in the Torrance Police Department has been named Soldier of the Month at the Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland.

He is PFC John Ainsworth, now attached to the Military Police Co., Edgewood Arsenal. Ainsworth was presented with a desk clock and a citation from the Veterans of Foreign Wars to commemorate his selection.

Criteria for the award included military bearing, conduct, and attention to duties. Col. John Hays, deputy commander of the arsenal, made the formal presentation.
