Here Are Safety Rules For School Bus Riders

An estimated 13 million of the 43 million school-age children will use school buses daily this year, according to the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Many of these youngsters will be riding school buses for the first time this year. Many others may have forgotten some of the rules they learned last year.

Even before school starts, parents should make sure their children are ready to accept the part in making buses safe, the National Safety Council says.

Pupils should leave their homes early enough to reach the bus stop in time for the bus, but without undue haste. At the same time, they should not be so early that they have a considerable wait.

WHEN IT'S necessary for the children to walk along a road, rather than a sidewalk, to reach the bus stop, they should walk on the left side — facing traffic. They should keep as far to the left of the shoulder as possible. If there is no shoulder, or if it is narrow or wet and slippery, they should not walk more than two abreast. Single file is better, and a group should never spread out over a major part of the roadway.

The pupils should board the bus without delay, but without crowding or pushing. They should take their seats promptly, and remain in them until the bus has reached its destination and has completely stopped.

The children should be taught how to cross highways at the proper places and with full consideration of traffic. Nearly all states have laws requiring motorists to stop for school buses taking on or discharging passengers in rural areas. But not all motorists observe these laws.

IN MOST communities, pupils are directed to step in front of the bus after leaving it and to wait until the driver signals that it is safe to walk—not run—across the highway. The children should not rely entirely to the driver's signal, but should observe the traffic themselves. It should be emphasized that this procedure is used only with school buses.

Many schools organize school bus patrols — usually two students per bus whose job it is to help the driver and the passengers. Passengers should follow their directions.

Children should be taught not to put their heads or arms out the windows. They should not throw things about inside the bus or out of windows or doors.

They should understand the use of emergency doors, but should not tamper with them during normal travel.

CHIC ... Fashion lists of back-to-school needs start with a coat like this. Fashioned in a monotone loop wool and mohair fabric, this demi-fit double-breasted coat highlights welt seaming and soft gathers at the natural waistline.

Adult Courses Cover Areas Of Medicine

Two classes in the field of medicine are scheduled for September at the Gardena Adult School, 182nd and Normandie Avenue.

Medical Terminology will be conducted on Wednesday nights with Dr. J. J. Durkin serving as instructor. On Thursday nights, a class on Medical Office Procedure will be conducted by Mrs. Jean Davis, who is associated with gynecologist E. M. Broen.

Information regarding the courses and registration may be obtained from the school office.

Collegians Traveling In Style

A man can't hang around the campus all the time. And as a group, college men — and coeds, too—are among the most traveled anywhere. Last year, 12 per cent of all passports were issued to students, making them the second largest category of overseas travelers. This is in addition to the one in two collegians who travel to an out-of-state school.

That's why modern leather luggage is a particularly good buy for a collegian—freshman or senior. Designed for jet age travel, today's leather bag is light in hand, rugged enough to resist scratch, scar and stain and is elegantly masculine as ever. And the look of genuine leather is an unmistakable status symbol in the Ivy League or at State University.

WITH SIX in every ten college students attending schools more than 200 miles from home, soft-sided leather airplane luggage is practical. In a variety of sizes from club bag to companion bag (just short of the traditional two-suit), "carry-on" airplane luggage has been re-styled and reshaped to tuck under an airplane seat.

The heavy wood frame has been replaced by light aluminum or magnesium struts to save valuable pounds at the weigh-in counter.

IN ADDITION to the "carry-on," which takes the burden out of quick trips between home and campus, a man needs the basic 28-inch leather suitcase. The so-called two-suit will hold, in addition to two suits, a large variety of other clothing. Many a student carries his basic wardrobe in a pair, or in a matched leather set — two-suit, one-suit and club bag.
