

Ann Landers

boarding high school children is an enormous responsibility, not to mention the additional work.

If you do not want to do it, be as blunt with them as you were with me and say no. This makes more sense than knuckling under for fear of what the relatives will say or think.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter in your column today from the mother in a T.B. hospital. Since I have lived through the experience I wanted to let her know how my case turned out.

My boys were 7 and 9 years of age. My husband had his own trucking business and was away from home a great deal. When the doctor told me I would have to be hospitalized for several months I didn't see how we could manage. We could only obtain part-time help and most of that proved inefficient. However, it is amazing how self-sufficient children can be when put to the test.

I returned home well and happy after 10 months. Three years later we had a baby girl. I rejoiced that I stayed away from the family that 10 months and did not risk infecting them. Incidentally, the boys learned to do a great many things for themselves and will be better husbands because of it.—MRS. O. A. P.

Dear Mrs. P.: Many thanks for your fine letter. I appreciate your taking the time to share your experience with us.

To learn the booby-traps of teenage drinking, write for ANN LANDERS' booklet "Teenage Drinking," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope. Each officer and chairman of the South Bay group will head a discussion table on the activities of their various duties. As the exchange of ideas flow, notes will be jotted down and later related to the guest's hometown twin club. Groups will be divided under the headings of elected offices, philanthropy, publicity, ways and means, and membership. At the conclusion of the round-table talks, a resume will be given by the South Bay members.

Not only will new ideas be gained on the workings of a club, but it will provide a chance to become acquainted with others who are doubly-blessed.

At last year's workshop, the South Bay chapter was rated as the club doing the most for its community with their extensive philanthropic program. Good Luck 'Troll' Now At May Co.

Latest fad in the teenage group is a two-inch-high good luck mascot called "Troll." Troll is an ugly little creature with staring eyes and long hair which can be worked into a knot or left to stand straight up.

The Trolls, made in Denmark, are supposed to bring good luck but their popularity hinges on more than this one characteristic. They have a smiling surprised expression on their ugly little faces which make them adorable.

For weeks teenagers all over the Southern California area have been looking for Trolls and once they arrived at the May Co. they went so fast it was as if they had never been there at all. They are again available at the May Co. stores.
