I USE THE McClatchy newspapers as an example to avoid accidentally offending any Southern California newspapers. However, in fairness to the McClatchy newspapers, I am happy to report that when anyone is attacked or praised by them, the reasons for the attack or praise are given in detail.

Although the McClatchy newspapers generally support Democratic party policies and candidates, on one occasion they severely criticized one of Governor Brown's policies and proceeded to detail, step-by-step, why they opposed the Governor on that issue. The same newspaper criticized one of my bills but also explained the reason for the opposition. In other issues, The Sacramento Bee praised some of my bills and again gave the reasons for their attitude. This is good journalism. "Any public official," to quote one of Harry Truman's less profane expressions, "should get out of the kitchen if he cannot stand the heat."

SINCE ABOUT 1950, all over the United States the number of large metropolitan newspapers has been reduced and no new ones have been started.

In Los Angeles there are two large dailies instead of the four which existed for many years. The reason of course is the growth of suburban cities and the creation of new cities. At the same time, the large city department stores have opened suburban branches which, together with the super-markets, provide advertising revenue for the suburban and local city newspapers. Increased income from advertising has made it possible for most suburban and local city newspapers to carry more news — not only more local news but also international and national news.

The newspapers are an important form of education.

School board meetings, city council meetings, the actions of the county supervisors, the activities of the State Legislature, and the prolonged deliberations of the U. S. Congress, are all presented in detail. Personally, I read both Los Angeles metropolitan newspapers and all the papers published in the 46th District, where we have one daily, two semi-weekly, and several weekly papers.

IN ADDITION to current events, newspapers publish editorials and feature columns on art, science, religion, history, psychology, first aid to the injured, advice to the lonely or lovelorn, the social cus-cesses of the rich, and the pitiful problems of the poor.

All these facts relate directly to my duties as a member of the California State Legislature. People who read newspapers carefully are well informed and able to write intelligent suggestions to me regarding legislation.
