Offering the peanuts are Ken Searles, Randy Hale, and Evan Smith. The peanut sale will run through Oct. 28.

Peanut Sale Helps Carson Student Body

Thousands of cans were distributed to students at Carson High School last Wednesday as the school began its drive to raise funds for the student body.

The drive, now in its second year, will continue through Oct. 28. Each student will get six cans of peanuts to sell at 50 cents each. About 12,000 cans were bought for the drive.

Nearly 10,700 cans were sold last year, raising nearly $3,500 for the school. The money was used to buy the bright new uniforms for the Carson High School Marching Band.

that separated the family home from Redondo Beach.

THE RETIRING fire officer has moved to a 20-acre ranch near Mariposa in the Yosemite area.

"I'm not going to be a big rancher, but I may get a cow or two," he said.

Walker is leaving the department earlier than he had planned, but several injuries have forced him to give up a career that requires a lot of physical agility. He was injured in 1959 while fighting the Palos Verdes blaze which swept across the west end of the Peninsula at the same time the huge Malibu fire was raging. At that time he fell and crushed a disc in his neck. The following year, he slipped at a crawlhole while inspecting a new building, and in 1961 tore a cartilage.

"YOU JUST don't get up and down those ladders very well with a bum knee," he said. And ladders, to a fireman, are a way of life.

Of the oldtimers who can hark back to the days of the call firemen, only three are left with Walker's retirement: Chief J. J. Benner, who has announced his plans to retire after this year, Bn. Chief Gordon Northington, and Captain Walter West.

That old ladder truck that caught Walker's eye has been replaced (at least once), most of the firemen have been replaced, and the city has changed in an unbelievable manner.

The only thing that remains are the memories, and Walker leaves the department with more of them than he can stuff under the biggest white hat.
