Father, Son Join Forces At Press Day

El Camino College's annual Press Day brought Father's Day to one Torrance family early this year. Ray Duerloo, an honorary host for the 10th annual Press Day at the college, finally achieved a three-year ambition by greeting his son Robert.

The senior Duerloo, whose outstanding photographic work has been seen throughout the Torrance area, has been studying advanced photo-journalism techniques at El Camino.

FORCED into an early retirement by illness, Duerloo continued his course work at El Camino. He had hoped to greet his son, who represented South High at the festivities, two years ago, but illness kept him home. The same illness also prevented him from attending last year's festivities also.

The younger Duerloo is a senior at South High School and represented the South High paper at the press day. His father has received national recognition for his photography.

After graduation, Bob will enroll at El Camino—in photo-journalism, of course. The next ambition of the father and son team is to enroll together at the college.

HC Palette Club Reproduces Mural

Members of the Palette Club, artists of Harbor College, are reproducing a prize-winning mural, designed by Patricia Pascual, for the Peninsula Shopping Mall. New colors, brought from Mexico by Harold Jones, art instructor and club advisor, are being tested for the mural which depicts the wind, waves, and peninsula.

While the three major networks, NBC, CBS and ABC continue to concern themselves largely with whether or not "Beverly Hillbillies" can beat "Ben Casey" next season, a fourth network has been sneaking up on them.

I suggest that the Messrs. Sarnoff, Stanton and Moore look over their shoulders and they'll see the fastest growing network of all, NET (National Educational Television) which now has 71 stations in every major market in the nation except in Los Angeles where it's needed most.

NET is dedicated to the proposition that millions of thinking Americans at all intelligence levels are yearning to have their horizons widened. They are determined to do it without commercials.

Recently in New York, John F. White, NET president, outlined his plans for the fall. They are far more varied and interesting than anything I saw on the drawing boards of the Nielsen networks.

One of the major drawbacks of NET has been the age of its news shows.

In the 1963-64 line-up NET is creating a special 21-city loop covering the nation which can be "fed" by NET in New York, or elsewhere in case of a hot news story requiring immediate telecasting or one-day-delay newscasts.

Thirty documentaries have been acquired or planned from England's BBC and Canada nets, Japan's NHK, Australia's ABC and CBS Granada—plus continuing international "Intertel" line-up.

NET's "Festival of the Arts" will continue with a series of hour-long concerts by symphony orchestras from United States cities not previously represented on coast-to-coast TV. The cities include San Francisco, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Detroit. Several music festivals will be telecast. Another series features seldom-performed Italian operas filmed in Rome with such stars as Anna Moffo.

The short stories of Saki will provide a series of hour-long dramas. Additional NET dramas will include Cocteau's "Typewriter" and "Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet" and "Twelfth Night" in 90-minute adaptations. France will continue to supply the interesting "Art and Man" series.

On the lighter side is a new series, "The Glory Trail" explaining what happened to the Wild West. "Olympic Sports" is a documentary timed to coincide with the 1964 Olympics—which will pinpoint individual sports.

WYES in New Orleans is creating a series titled "The Cradle of Jazz." Ralph Gleason's "Jazz Casual" will be continued from San Francisco's KQED, plus a three-part special on recordings titled "The Diary of a Hit."

"Writers of Today" continues with Edward Weeks, editor of Atlantic Monthly, as host. The work of American designer Buckminster Fuller is studied in a four-part series. The astonishing growth of the professional theater outside New York is examined in a 12-part series.

While all commercial stations are heavily loaded with old feature films programmed in helter-skelter fashion with little regard for quality, NET is planning a meaningful series titled "Classic Feature Films," comprising great movies of all nations. The films range from "Jules and Jim" and "L'Avventura" to "Les Enfants Du Paradis" and "The Blue Angel."

NET is well aware of the confusion created when the commercial nets abandoned children's programs. For several seasons they have been presenting "What's New" based on the theory "start a children's program and don't stop it, even if you have to repeat." It will continue with 60 new programs including a series on early American heroes and legends, the disappearing circus, photography for youngsters, sports with emphasis on the Olympics, coral reefs, and life along the Mississippi.

In the field of science NET will provide 52 programs for the two series "Science Reporter" and "Space Science '63." In the planning stages are programs of junior high space science, modern chemistry, the population explosion, engineering, and an adult space series.

In the practical field, NET is producing a series of 26 programs titled "Consumer Information" on such subjects as how to buy a used car, deceptive advertising and meat grading standards.
