Harvey Sales Up, Aluminum Prices Down

Net sales for Harvey aluminum for the six months ending March 31, rose to $38,427,159 from $38,025,033 for the corresponding months a year earlier, Lawrence A. Harvey, president, reported.

Net income for the period was $2,889,843 or 50 cents a share as compared with $3,372,786 or 59 cents a share for the like period of 1962. The lower earnings were attributed to the general drop in aluminum prices.

"Progress has been made," Harvey said, "in the company's efforts to find new applications for aluminum products as well as for items fabricated from titanium, zirconium, steel alloys, and other special metals. Operations at the company's new fabricating plant in Adrian, Mich., are steadily expanding, and construction of an aluminum plant in the Virgin Islands is well under way. Final plans are being drawn up for the company's rolling mill in the Ohio Valley."
