 cepted. He brought along a corsage of green baby orchids. My dress was electric blue. I wore the flowers although electric blue and green are hideous together, as you can imagine.

Two weeks later it happened again. He brought along a corsage of red roses. My dress was a flaming tangerine. The color combination couldn't have been more nauseating.

Last week his lodge had its summer formal. This time he went all out—a huge purple orchid. My gown was ming dynasty red. I couldn't bear to put that purple flower on my red gown. So I pinned it to my evening bag. I'm afraid he was hurt.

Do you have any advice for me? This man seems to have a rare talent for selecting flowers of exactly the wrong color.—ERNA

Dear Erna: Don't discourage his tender sentiments. Just let him know that your favorite flowers are white—roses, lilies, mums. Any-peonies, lilies, mums. Anything white.
