boss, which, in my opinion, is the wise thing to do.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from "Pixie Face," the girl who wanted to know how to get rid of a nice-nice boy friend who wouldn't give up, reminded me of myself a year ago. I hope she knows what she is doing. I didn't—and I'll regret it to my dying day.

I was dating a marvelous guy I'll call Jack. He was a perfect gentleman, treated me beautifully and was as kind and considerate as a guy could be. Somehow another fellow got into the act. I will call him Phil. He was good-looking, had loads of sex-appeal and I was flattered by his attention.

I began to give Jack the cold treatment—broke dates on him at the last minute when Phil called me and I was just plain rotten to him.

After a while Jack stopped calling. Well, Phil turned out to be a real louse—selfish, mean and interested in only one thing. Jack started to date another girl and I just heard that they plan to announce their engagement soon. I realize now what a swell guy I lost and I could kick myself with a heavy combat boot. —HEARTACHE

Dear Heartache: One of the good things about a rough experience is that sometimes we learn from it. I suspect you have learned plenty—and that's good.
