

El Camino To Present Award Play

"The Miracle Worker," a dramatization of William Gibson's prize-winning novel, will be presented by the theater arts department of El Camino College, Dec. 12 through 15. The play, which revolves around the binding relationship between Helen Keller, totally blind and deaf since early childhood, and her teacher, Anne Sullivan, is headed by Sondra Lowell as Helen and Gayle McClellan as Anne. Other cast members include Nancy McCarthy as Kate Keller, Richard Centola as Arthur

Keller, Mike Hicks as James Keller, Jane Cobabe as Aunt Ev, Helen Thompson as Viney and Isa Raumberger as Martha. "We feel the theme of this play is its timeliness—universal in concept—and truly represents the Christmas spirit in its simplicity," stated Burnett Ferguson, director. Reserved tickets for the production are on sale in the college book store at $1.25 for adults and 75 cents for students and children. Performances will be 8:30 p.m. Dec. 12-14, and 2:30 p.m. Dec. 15.

Harbor Librarian

Thelma V. Taylor, head librarian at Harbor College, will lead a workshop on "Junior College Library Standards" at the annual meeting of the California Library Assn., now in progress in San Francisco.

Leads Workshop

Mrs. Taylor was president of the California Junior College Librarians Round Table in 1962. The workshop will include representatives from El Camino College, as well as other junior colleges.

HOLLYWOOD—Those of us who devote most of our efforts to the study and evaluation of television in America and who incessantly illuminate the sins of omission and commission of the broadcasting industry are especially obligated, it seems to me, to bestow upon these beleaguered people the recognition due for a tragically necessary job superbly done.

For almost a century television was slowly and painstakingly created by hundreds of scientists and visionary tinkers. As early as 1884 a German named Nipkow invented a mechanical scanning device which was crude forerunner of a television camera. Each year or two inventive people of all nationalities deeded little touches of their own to a concept later to be known as broadcasting. Finally a sophisticated system of picture transmission without wires was developed and perfected. In the United States this complex of technical know-how came to be an arm of commerce. Only a slight degree of governmental supervision was allowed and that only to allocate the frequencies to be used and to insure that the entire system was used in the public "interest, convenience, and necessity."

FROM TIME to time there have been clear signs that the public's interest was sublimated to the interests of commerce. It is toward this failing that students of the industry fling the truest and most poisonous slings and arrows.

From time to time we have seen this electronic creation serve the public in stalwart and pioneering ways, eschewing, at least temporarily, the irrelevant things to which it is normally dedicated. From time to time it allows us to become eyewitnesses to history.

AT NO TIME in history has this medium of communications had deeper personal meaning to more people than it did during the shocked, shameful, sorrowed, and soulful days from Nov. 22, through Nov. 25. The TV coverage, which met the highest standards of human dignity, was a costly undertaking for the broadcasting industry. And it isn't to say glibly, "It was their duty." Their simple duty could have been served more simply and at far less time, trouble, and cost.

While many businesses slowed down, few, if any, came to a total, four-day halt. Radio and television, however, experienced a four-day loss that can never be recovered. Estimates of the cost to American broadcasting industry have ranged from $30 to $100 million. Each of the three great networks will have incurred losses close to $3 million.

STORES AND other establishments which either closed or whose business dried to a slow trickle will recover part, if not all, of their losses. Newspapers continued to be published with the support of continued advertising. I can not think of a single commercial enterprise in the nation aside from radio and television stations which incurred a four-day moratorium of all income.

And this is income that can not be recovered. Radio and television have but one product to sell. That is time, and time alone. Once the clock ticks off 60 seconds, those 60 seconds are gone forever, along with any revenue that they might have produced for radio and TV stations. The broadcasting industry deserves a full measure of appreciation from us all.

Civic Group Holds Zone Change Meet

Proposed zone changes and appointment of committees to study various problems of the area were the main topics of the Walteria Civic Organization meeting this week.

Members also heard a report from the board of directors concerning the meeting held with the Planning Commission. The next meeting will be held Jan. 7 and all Walteria residents are welcome to attend and join the organization.

Auction Tomorrow

The annual art auction featuring work by Long Beach State College art students will be held in Room 102 of Fine Arts Building No. 4 on campus tomorrow. From noon until 6 p.m. objects will be auctioned by faculty members.

AND IN another sense television matured during those days. Until then international satellite broadcasting was a some-time thing of transmitting planned events. But on the days of Mr. Kennedy's funeral millions of people of 23 foreign nations were able to see live transmissions of portions of the procession, specifically that between the White House and St. Matthews Cathedral. Relay was in the proper position for about 29 minutes.

This signals the first time Russia has carried an American originated event. It was also fed into the Iron Curtain network, Intervention. The picture was provided by NBC and European correspondents gathered in the NBC New York studios to report the happenings in their own languages, the narrations being transmitted by cable or radio and rejoined with the picture in Europe.

As Daily Variety phrased it, it was "TV's performance pinnacle."
