

... Ann Landers

she had remained quiet and telephoned the next day to inform you of the uninvited guest at the canasta party.

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago I remarried for companionship. It seemed like a fine arrangement for two older people who were lonely. I had a little money and Cyril was comfortably fixed. Together, we have made some good investments. Cyril's only child, a daughter who married well, told me recently that when her father dies there will be no bickering over his estate because she is his sole heir. This was so embarrassing I made no reply.

I hesitate to mention the incident to my husband because he may feel I am criticizing his daughter. I have seen her three times since the ugly remark was made and confess I am no longer warmly disposed toward the girl. I fear this feeling will grow and it will drive a wedge between her father and me. Can you advise me?
— FORT LAUDERVILLE WOMAN

Dear Woman: If you have not sat down with your husband and an attorney to discuss your wills (his and yours) this should be the first order of business next Monday morning.

Don't repeat the daughter's ugly remark to your husband. It would serve no purpose except to worsen a relationship which doesn't sound particularly healthy.

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Six" ($2.95), is now available at your book store. Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

How much safety do you want for your money?

Financial safety comes in all shapes and sizes. There are safe investments and risky investments—and ones that are in between. Depending upon how much risk you want to take, your money can be invested in a variety of ways.

Your savings, however, are another thing. This is money you do not want to risk—no matter how safe the investment appears. This is money you want to be able to count on at all times and under all conditions. And when you want your money that safe and that available—you want it in the bank
