a monied background. I have news. Money never made a lady out of any female. Some of the wealthiest homes produce the worst slob. By the same token, I've known plenty of girls, brought up in poverty, who were well-bred and refined. It's training that counts, not loot.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 16-year-old girl who has been a faithful follower of your column ever since I was old enough to read.

I broke up with my boy friend two months ago because he wanted me to prove my love. I know I did the right thing, but still it doesn't make life any easier for me. I can't get him out of my thoughts.

Every evening I re-read his letters and gaze at his picture which I took off the dresser and put in the drawer. I keep looking at the little trinkets he bought me and the favors from dances and parties we attended together. I am moved to tears when I play our favorite records.

How can I get over this broken romance?

GRIEVING
Dear Grieving: Stop trying to re-live the past. Toss out the old letters, and the trinkets. Return his picture or dispose of it permanently. And put those "favorite" records at the bottom of the pile. Most important—remember there's nothing like a new romance to help a gal recover from heart trouble.

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Rex" ($2.95), is now available at your book store.

How much safety do you want for your money?

Financial safety comes in all shapes and sizes. There are safe investments and risky investments—and ones that are in between. Depending upon how much risk you want to take, your money can be invested in a variety of ways.

Your savings, however, are another thing. This is money you do not want to risk—no matter how safe the investment appears. This is money you want to be able to count on at all times and under all conditions. And when you want your money that safe and that available—you want it in the bank.
