CHARLES LINDAHL
 Joins El Camino

Kansan Takes Internship At El Camino

Junior college administration "from the ground up" is the interest of Charles Lindahl, administrative intern at El Camino College this year.

The successor to Herbert L. Swanson, administrative intern at the college for the past two years, he comes to El Camino from Kansas State Teachers College, Emporia Kan., where he served as assistant director of admissions. Lindahl's interest in the junior college movement resulted from his liaison work with the Kansas junior colleges.

Lindahl is a Kellogg fellow with the University of California at Los Angeles, Junior College leadership program. Under this arrangement, he spends two or three days a week at the junior college and a similar period of time in formal study at the university. His work is planned and supervised by Dr. Stuart E. Marsee, president; Merl F. Sloan, director of student personnel, and Swanson, now coordinator of research and placement.

AT EL CAMINO College, Lindahl has assisted with scheduling, examination of credentials of prospective employees, review of accreditation materials, registration, and revision of the faculty handbook.

He has made studies of perceptions of probation students, occupational experiences of a group of El Camino College graduates and teacher load. Lindahl has also worked on the development of a counseling handbook and a procedures handbook for the registration office.

El Camino's intern is enthusiastic in his endorsement of El Camino College and the leadership program. He feels the latter is successful in fulfilling its objective of supplying opportunities to relate college administrative experience to the theory and principles studied at the university by providing on-the-job experiences for interns and significant services to colleges.
