Place Lamps Properly For Right Light

Don't expect your floor and table lamps to serve as anything more than decorative pieces when you place them in the wrong position.

Every homemaker is interested in placing her lamps where they will look best. However, when there is a serious seeing job to be done, lamps should be no more than 24 to 30 inches from your work for best lighting results.

Don't place a table lamp, for instance, in the center of a large table and then expect it to light a chair located several feet away. Many of our modern lamps, especially CLM which give guaranteed amounts of light, are carefully designed for top lighting performance only when properly placed.

Here are a few helpful hints to keep in mind when rearranging lamps for best lighting results. (You may even want to clip this article out of your paper and file it in your recipe folder for future reference.)

Floor lamps which are so often pulled too far forward for eye comfort, should be placed close to the left rear corner of a chair. This will give a greater spread of light on your book or newspaper and also keep you from seeing the uncomfortable brightness under the shade when seated in your chair.

Table lamps which are used beside chairs or sofas should be placed in line with the shoulder of the person seated in the chair. When sewing, writing or doing other handiwork, place the lamp on the opposite side from your hand so that your hand will not cast shadows on your work.

Use your tallest floor lamp to give light at a grand piano. Place the lamp close to the keyboard. Spinnet and miniature pianos may be lighted with the swivel-arm type floor lamp which is also excellent for lighting broad arm chairs and ironing boards since the arm can be extended until the light is nearer the work to be done.

For an over-all smooth lighting effect, distribute floor and table lamps using several on one wall and none on another, for this will create an unpleasant spotty effect.

Don't hesitate to move a lamp toward you if it must be placed, for appearance sake, more than 30 inches from your work. This simple habit may even convince

Mission Xavier
Mission of San Xavier Del Bac, located nine miles south of Tucson in Arizona, is reported by the National Automobile Club to be one of the most beautiful mission structures in the Southwest. You that not every lamp needs to be placed directly in the center of a table.
