New Tulips

Among the old garden maxims which has become obsolete is the one about the depth of planting seeds and bulbs. "Four times the diameter of the seed or bulb," it said.

Of course larger seeds and bulbs usually go deeper than small ones, but there are exceptions, and the "four times" formula may be definitely misleading, especially in fall planting. A big problem for those who live where the ground freezes deeply in winter, is frost heaving. During thaws, there is always danger that bulbs too near the surface may be lifted entirely out of the ground by alternate expansion and contraction of the soil.

Any bulb you plant should be set sufficiently deep to escape this frost action. For this, three inches of soil above the bulb is a minimum. Even snowdrops and scillas are in danger, and the later a bulb is planted in the fall, the greater the danger. If planted early enough to develop roots before the freeze-up, the roots will anchor it. Cover all late plantings with a mulch after the ground freezes to shade the ground and prevent thawing prematurely.

When tulips are to be dug up each summer, they need not be planted as deeply as when they are left in the ground for several years. The reason here is that when planted with 4 to 5 inches of soil above them, they will multiply, developing small bulbs which will bear inferior flowers until they grow up, and then will crowd. If not lifted and replanted this crowding will usually cause the bulbs to die out.

When bulbs are to be left in the ground for several years, plant them with 10 inches of soil above them, and they will not multiply, but all the energy of each one will be devoted to developing a single new bulb, which should bear a normal flower the following year. Tulips get among other plants cannot be dug yearly without disturbing their neighbors, so should be set deeply and allowed to stay as long as they continue to bloom.

STEM ROSTERS

There are new ideas these days about the depth of planting lily bulbs. Here deep planting has been advised, especially for those which are "stem-rooters," developing roots on the stem below the bulb. American growers on the Pacific coast say they get best results from planting all lilies except the madonna lily and its hybrids, with soil above them equal to the diameter of the bulb. Madonnas they barely cover with soil. But in cold weather sections lilies are not exempt from frost heaving, so amateurs will be well advised to protect their lily bulbs by setting them with at least 3 inches of soil above them, and guard them from premature frost action by covering the frozen ground with a shading mulch.

All the world over it is true that a double minded man is unstable in all his ways, like a wave on the streamlet, tossed hither and thither with every eddy of its tide.—W. M. Funchon.

Modern Type Furniture Is More Popular

Furniture of modern design has gained even wider consumer acceptance this year, according to a recent survey conducted by the research staff of the National Retail Furniture Association, which was reported in the National Furniture Review.

For purposes of the survey, modern design includes adaptations of classic styles and contemporary versions of traditional pieces as well as extreme functional modern.

The national survey covered two-piece upholstered suites, upholstered sofas, separate chairs, wood living room tables, three-piece bedroom sets, eight-piece dining room sets, five-piece chrome dinette groups and five-piece wood dinettes.

In some instances public style and color preferences followed a regional pattern. Generally, the Middle West, the West North Central and South Central states chose modern styles, while period, Early American and Commercial styles were in demand along the Atlantic seaboard from Maine to Florida. On the West Coast, modern also was the leading style.
