UNITING THE DEFENSE OF THE UNITED STATES

How we've geared the telephone system to meet today's emergency

1. How fast can we spread the word? Since the days of Paul Keever, the nation's strength in times of crisis has depended on swift, reliable communications. Today, the telephone is at work helping our military men organize their forces... at work saving minutes and hours and days in defense production plants... at work nearly everywhere uniting the strength of our millions of people.

2. Emergency facilities of our own are being added, too. Like this standby generator which can produce our own electricity in case of power line failure. Special plans have been made to rush "telephone task forces" of men and materials into strategic areas, if need be. In every way possible, we're making sure the calls keep going through... the calls which mean so much to our nation.

3. Since Pearl Harbor, we've put well over a billion dollars into telephone facilities in the Pacific West. We've made many, many technical improvements to speed and extend the service. The result: A telephone system far stronger than ever, doubled in size. We could do it because, over the years, we've had the financial strength to attract the investors' savings we must have to pay expansion costs. And with financial strength in the future, we can continue to build our ability to serve you and our nation.
