Final P.V. Hearing Set For December

Those favoring the erection of a diacalite plant in Palos Verdes gave testimony before the Board of Supervisors Tuesday with the hearing being adjourned once more so that the complete testimony may be heard in what the board called a serious matter.

The final hearing was set for December 3 at 10 a.m. in the Hall of Records, Room 501.

Evidence brought by Great Lakes Carbon corporation maintained that the diatomaceous earth operation would definitely not be detrimental to health, with testimony being brought by a physician, technical experts, and workers in other plants.

City Protests
Among those voicing vehement protests last week against the granting of a permit to mine diatomaceous earth in Palos Verdes was the city of Torrance.

A request that Great Lakes Carbon corporation be denied to operate such a mine in Palos Verdes was submitted to the County Board of Supervisors by City Manager George Stevens, who also requested that the Walteria plant of the subsidiary Diacalite corporation be placed "under more strict control."

Objections
Objections to the Palos Verdes project were based on these grounds:

1. Continual use of residential streets by heavily laden trucks.
2. Discharge of waste material into a storm drain channel, thereby creating a nuisance and expense to the city to clean up.
3. Dust from the plant and trucks create a further nuisance.

Last Thursday's hearing, which lasted a full day, heard the testimony mainly of those objecting to such a plant.

Attorneys William Kinley and Roland Swaffield spoke against the plant.

Dr. Frank Porter Miller, a chest disease specialist, claimed that diatomaceous earth "kills people." Attorney Leroy A. Garrett, representing the corporation, attempted to refute the physician by eating a chunk of the chalk-like substance. Eating the material, the audience shouted, did not prove it was not harmful to the lungs.

FIRST GOLD LODE
The first gold lode west of the Mississippi was discovered in 1833 near Santa Fe in New Mexico, reports the National Automobile club. This lode was worked on the famous Sierra de Oro or Mountain of Gold and is now known as the Ortiz mine.
