THERE IS AN ANSWER

Torrance High School will go on half-day sessions in the fall, according to a recent ruling of the Board of Education.

The Torrance Press last week pointed out one way of avoiding this highly undesirable trend.

There are additional measures which we feel the Board should adopt to cope with the menace of half-day sessions.

Here is a plan worthy of consideration.

Instead of the present system, Torrance schools should be converted to a quarter system. This would mean the use of the school buildings 12 months out of the year instead of the present nine months. There would be three semesters per year with students attending school two out of the three semesters. Vacations would be staggered. When we consider the big investment involved, it is a waste to use our schools just nine months out of the year.

There are numerous benefits to be derived from such a plan.

We could reduce the number of new school buildings needed, thus reducing our building costs at the same time that we are providing increased teaching facilities.

While there is a large population influx into this area at present, it is conceivable that the trend will be reversed some day. If we build too many schools now, we might be faced with a lot of empty schools at such a time.

The community would be able to cope with juvenile problems much more easily, since only one-third of our youth would be out of school each quarter. Now the entire student body is let out at one time.

Not everyone will have vacation during the summer months as is presently the case, but California's weather makes vacations possible and desirable the year round.

Industry, no doubt, would cooperate in rotating vacations for its employees to correspond with children's vacations. The same ought to be done by the schools.

Teachers who are willing and able to teach an extra quarter could be given the opportunity to do so and thus help solve the so-called "teacher shortage" and "higher cost of living."

The quarter-system will afford better opportunities for high school youngsters to obtain jobs, since only one-third of them would be out of school at a time.

We believe that the quarter-system has great merit and desires the consideration of the Board of Education and the community.

We welcome an expression of ideas on this subject by our readers.

Summer Play Program Gets Under Way

Eight school playgrounds and four parks in Torrance are offering a wide variety of organized sports and games, training in the field, drama and entertainment.

These facilities are being offered free to the public under the supervision of experienced personnel, according to Harry B. Van Bellehem, Director of Recreation.

In addition to the usual sports activities, children will receive training in woodshop, ceramics, flower making, metal work, puppetry and jewelry making. Talent shows will be organized so that children can participate in various entertainment programs.

Children of school age are asked to contact the director of the park or playground nearest them.

Road Denied

A request to make the entrance to El Retiro Park into a road for vehicles was denied last week by the planning commission. Denial was based on the danger such a road would be to children.

Ground-breaking ceremonies were held Monday on a $250,000 builders' supply center to be located at 178th and Normandie avenue. The firm, located on a 10-acre site, will be known as the Acme Plywood company and Saul Pick, Incorporated.

Completion date has been set three months from now. The firm will make sash doors and frames. The front part of the building will be a complete builders' supply center.

The firm will employ about 100 people. The center will eventually provide everything needed for the home, it was revealed.

Savage Dog Bites Boy's Face

'FIND DOG', PARENTS PLEAD

Three-year-old Billy Britt of 2116 Gramercy ave. is receiving a series of 14 painful daily Pasteur shots. He must undergo this agonizing treatment because the vicious dog which bit a deep gash into Billy's lip cannot be placed under observation and has eluded every attempt at capture.

Immediate Treatment
Billy was bitten by the dog Sunday afternoon at 209 West 214th street, Torrance. Because of the bite's proximity to the brain, doctors immediately began a series of Pasteur treatments. These treatments are the only safeguard against rabies which are always fatal. The injections must be applied to the sensitive abdominal region. Billy has been suffering from severe abdominal pains and cramps, the (Continued on Page 4)

RESIDENTS EXPRESS IDEAS ON PARKING METER ISSUE

Arguments for and against parking meters were voiced at a special hearing before the city council Tuesday night. No date has been set for formal action on the matter.

Paul Loranger of 1448 Post avenue read a detailed report explaining the need of solving the parking problem and why parking meters were the answer.

Parking, to begin with, was definitely a problem, Loranger stated.

He pointed out that the only cost to the taxpayer was the penny parking fee they would have to pay and compared this nominal cost with the exorbitant cost of parking facilities in downtown Los Angeles.

Cost
He established that the cost of off-street parking would be borne by the businessmen themselves and not by the residential property owners. This would be done through an assessment district.

City Needs Derrick Ordinance

Abandoned oil derricks which serve no useful purpose and clutter up the Torrance landscape continue to stand because Torrance has no adequate laws to deal with the situation.

The last survey of the Torrance oil field indicated that there were about 39 abandoned wells. This survey was made over a year ago. It covered the area from Crenshaw to Western aves. and from Sepulveda blvd. to the Torrance boundary.

A few, simple legal provisions could easily remedy this condition, it was learned.

These facts were revealed in a study of the situation made by the Torrance Press.

Needed Provisions
Three provisions could eliminate unsightly oil derricks which no longer serve a useful purpose:

- 1) An ordinance which calls for the removal of any derrick without visible means of pumping equipment within 180 days;
- 2) Specific delegation of authority;
- 3) Making the oil well owner responsible for the removing of the derrick; if the responsible party cannot be determined, have the city assume that responsibility.

Idle Wells
Not all wells standing idle are abandoned wells. Many wells are pumped from time to time only, with a time-period of a few days to a few months elapsing sometimes between pumpings.

It is difficult to legislate against such wells, it was learned. But legislation against actually abandoned wells is both possible and desirable, it was found.

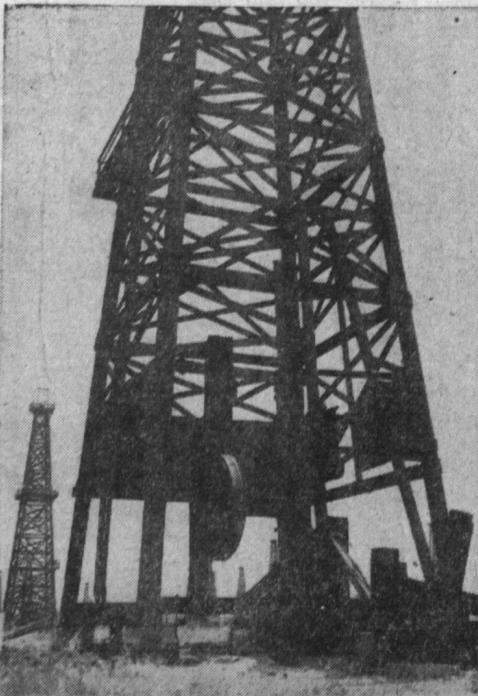

Redondo Annexation Sly Move

The city of Redondo Beach pulled a neat stunt in all quietness last week when it annexed some unincorporated territory in the El Nido district but continued to let the Torrance unified school district foot the educational bill.

The Torrance school district found itself holding the bag because the Redondo city council took advantage of a state law which says that it is up to a city as to what to do with the school district.

ABANDONED!

THIS IS ONE of numerous abandoned oil derricks dotting the Torrance landscape. The city has no proper law to enforce removal of these derricks. The above is owned by the Woolner Oil Co. and is located at 229th st. and Pennsylvania ave.

She had run her car-for-sale ad in a number of other papers but the only ad that paid off for her was the one in Torrance Press.

This is the way her classified ad read:

Chambers' prize-winning photo, entitled "Grey Goose—Mad! Real Mad!" was taken while teasing the goose with one of her new-born babies until the goose got fighting mad and turned on Chambers. "I just about lost a brand-new Argus C-4 in the process," Chambers explained.
