Slag To Wool Production Process At American Rock Wool Described

When the slag tailings left over from the manufacture of 20 Mule Team Borax are processed by the Torrance plant of the American Rock Wool Corp., mineral wool is produced. The slag tailings are the basic materials used for the production of mineral wool which is the basic step in home and plant insulation.

The bulk of production of the Torrance plant is sold in the Los Angeles area, although the local division is set up to service the West Coast.

Buyers Plant
The story of mineral wool in Torrance dates back some years to Coast Insulating Corp., whose plant was acquired in 1946 by American. Coast was producing granulated wool, white wool rolls, and white batts.

Then, one building took care of the processing, selling, and office staffs. Immediately after the purchase of the concern by American, a second plant was erected. During the following year, office buildings went up, and in 1948 the old plant was dismantled.

Today the sprawling facilities on Arlington Ave. across from Columbia Steel contain four batt lines, and various supplemental buildings to the main operation of combining minerals with chemicals to produce mineral wool. Space is also available, and utilized, for a large mineral stockpile.

Mixing Process
Preliminary mixing of the materials which go to make up mineral wool is done by a bulldozer, a tractor loader, and three standard dump trucks. Machinery is used because the basic minerals are received from the borax company in a state resembling wet earth, and are about as hard to handle.

From the mixing pile, the blended minerals move to a reverberatory furnace by overhead crane. The furnace is fed by hand, and under intense, reflected heat, bakes the wet minerals into the finished product.

Steam generated by the waste heat boilers through which exhaust gases pass is piped back for use in the manufacturing process. Natural gas, plus burning oils, is used as fuel.

Marineland To Open August 28

Workers at the Marineland of the Pacific with its two huge tanks are working toward an opening date of August 28, sources at the $3,000,000 development on Long Point in Palos Verdes said this week.

Water is pouring into both the 600,000 gallon circular tank and the 500,000 gallon oval tank which will contain the marine specimens to be the central attraction of the development.

For a week prior to the filling operation, workers were busy preparing the bottoms of the tanks with scenic marine formations which will serve the double purpose of making the bottom and providing protection for the tons of the tanks attractive smaller fish from their larger brothers.
