Cars pictured represent best mileage of each make.

The sixth annual Mobilgas Economy Run which finished Wednesday at the foot of Pike's Peak, after covering 1323 tortuous miles from Los Angeles in 2 1/2 days, proved one thing for sure: when American car manufacturers added horsepower, they didn't sacrifice mileage.

The 21 American cars, which were equipped with automatic transmission and certified absolutely stock by American Automobile Association, averaged an impressive 21.5 miles per gallon. This was achieved even though the average horsepower increase of 1955 over 1954 models was 17.6 per cent—an average increase of 26.7 horsepower.

The route chosen by AAA represented every road condition a motorist would normally experience in a year. Each contestant ran a maximum legal speed to meet time requirements. He adhered to normal driving rules and traffic conditions; to see that this was accomplished, he had at his side an official AAA observer. Each car, competing against others in its price class, was in top condition—properly fueled with Mobilgas and lubricated with Mobiloil.

Again, the Mobilgas Economy Run proves the mileage performance possible when good cars, good drivers, and good petroleum products work together. A regular stop at the Flying Red Horse sign for Mobilgas helps you to obtain "par" mileage on any course you run.

Official Results of the Mobilgas Economy Run

The Mobilgas Economy Run is a vigorously competitive, certified mileage test of American stock cars with automatic transmission. It is sponsored by General Petroleum Corporation to demonstrate the mileage and performance built into today's high horsepower automobiles.

The 1323-mile course streaked through the Indian country of the great Southwest. Temperature soared as the cars spun through the desert near Salton Sea, cooled to near freezing crossing the Continental Divide at the 9022-foot level.

FREE Booklet describing the colorful, historic Indian country of the Great Southwest through which the Mobilgas Economy Run passed. It's an exciting vacation trip. Write General Petroleum, Room 501, Box 2122, Terminal Annex, Los Angeles 64.
