West Basin Pumping To Be Reduced

A one-third reduction of pumping in the West Basin water district will start June 1 in order to protect the basin from sea water encroachment, it was announced this week.

A two-thirds curtailment has been proposed, requiring the furnishing of 100,000 acre feet of Metropolitan water each year.

Importing facilities are not capable of delivering the volume of water necessary to meet all basin demands during the summer periods of peak use.

This would require either costly surface storage reservoirs or the use of the ground water basin.

The best hope of providing this needed water, Carl Fossette of the water district stated, is through a replenishment district which would charge for pumping. The funds would be used for buying water to be injected into the grounds to halt salt water intrusion.
