A WAY OF LIFE

When not astride his horse, a Californian felt himself but half a man. From early childhood he had ridden, and his spirited mustang provided not only transportation but also entertainment and a way of life.

From dawn 'til sunset a "patron" rode his rancho attending to business. In times of "fiesta," a popular sport was horse racing, and large sums of money were wagered on each race. Horsemen of that day were so skillful they could easily pick a coin or handkerchief from the ground while riding at full gallop. All work possible was done on horseback. Even firewood for the rancho was lassoed and dragged to the door this way.

The horse was a way of life on early Rancho Palos Verdes and it is a part of life there today. For in the ravines and on the crests of rolling hills, modern horsemen and hikers find trails to follow and enjoy. Now as new homes, both large and small, are built on the rancho, it is planned that these trails be preserved for the enjoyment of all who come to live here.
