The program presented at the Los Angeles district assembly of the National Delphian society, held at the Beverly Hilton hotel last week, reflected the interests and purposes of the organization.

This group, dedicated to the encouragement of thought and grasp of women's affairs, presented Ben Alexander, the Frank Smith of "Dragnet," as guest lecturer; and a fashion show featuring the brilliant designs of one of America's top coutouriers, Don Loper.

Problem Lies Elsewhere
"You will find," he said, "that the seeds of juvenile crime were planted long before a juvenile saw a television show. In cases where homes are broken, parents are heedless, or the young people are given so much money and time that is unsupervised by their parents, it's fairly ridiculous to say the reason for their problem is television."

"Our most dangerous failing," he said, "lies in the fact that we are losing the art of conversation. We sit in our living rooms watching our television sets and we see things that affect us vitally, but we never turn off the set after the show and discuss the things we have seen."

"We lose the opportunity of talking to our children about the important things that have been said on the programs, because we are too eager to see the next show coming up."

"If we would learn to talk to our children," he finished, "we would learn more of the problems we are fighting and they are fighting."

Top Fashions

Following the luncheon served to the more than 1000 guests, the fashion show was presented by Country Club Fashions of Reseda. Top California models presented a stunning collection of perfectly coordinated fashions from casual to ultra formal.

Particularly interesting were the rags from skirts billowing out over numerous petticoats to the figure clinging sheaths, the use of broadcloth in city-dark shades, the "A" line jackets on suits, the omnipresence of tweed, and the combination of whipped-cream pink and flaming scarlet.

Local Members

Mrs. Allen Pyeatt of the local Kappa chapter was on the executive committee for the affair.

Local members attending the show were: Mmes. M. A. Bauman, R. E. Beecher, P. W. Cockrell, H. M. Davis, James N. Hawkins, L. G. Jones, Robert MacNickel, W. D. Reynolds, S. J. Paltin, D. J. Quinlivan, Walter G. Smith, Fred Sullivan, Jr., and W. F. Toombs.

A one hour all color cartoon will be presented for the small fry. A greased pole climb, football toss and other events have been planned for the teenagers. A huge bonfire will climax the party and when the coals of the bonfire are just right the older children will bake potatoes, roast weiners, and toast marshmallows.

Like All Good Tricks, It's Done With Mirrors

Members of Los Fiestodores should not be accused of vanity, although they spent a great deal of time in front of their mirrors this week.

Invitations to the "Hobgoblin Dance" to be held at the Jamaica Inn Saturday, October 22, at 9:30 p.m. were printed in a most unusual style.

After trying to read by standing on their heads, members discovered that the cards were written backwards, and had to be held up to a mirror.

Through this method, they were informed that anyone not wearing denims, jeans, or a straw hat would not be admitted to the affair.

On the committee for the dance are: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Almond, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ragsdale, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Moore, and Mr. and Mrs. Parke Montague.
