Arlington Storm Drain Progressing

Excellent progress is being made on construction of the Arlington-Glenburn bond issue storm drain in North Torrance. Supervisor Kenneth Hahn reported this week.

Early this week only three small sections of the main line drain remained to be installed in the Arlington avenue section of the $278,400 project which will provide flood control and drainage to a large area of North Torrance.

Supervisor Hahn explained that it was important that the Arlington section of the drain be completed in time for the Redondo Beach boulevard project to connect with it. The latter project in the City of Gardena, will go to contract on November 8.

The North Torrance drain is approximately one-half completed now and it is expected

Clark Market Food Sale Starts Today

Clark officials today announced the beginning of their Annual Carload Food Sale. The traditional yearly sale celebrates the Clark method of buying in straight carload lots and passing on the savings to its customers in the form of lower food prices.

All departments of all Clark markets will participate in the big sale, stated Clark officials, so that really big savings can be effected on the over-all food bill by those who take advantage of the sale and stock up now.

Literally hundreds of items will be sold at lower-than-ever prices.

that installation of the main drain along Glenburn from 176th street to Dominguez channel near Redondo Beach boulevard will be started in a few days.

The Arlington-Glenburn drain was designed by Torrance City Engineer Ronald W. Bishop. Contract was let by the board of supervisors, and construction is being supervised and inspected by the County Flood Control District, Supervisor Hahn said.

Hold Lake Dedication Ceremonies

United States Senator Thomas H. Kuchel was the principal speaker last week at ceremonies officially naming as "Redlinger Lake" one of Southern California Edison company's power reservoirs at its Big Creek-San Joaquin River hydroelectric development.

The 35,000 acre-foot Redlinger Lake is formed by Dam No. 7 and is a part of Edison's Big Creek project which includes a chain of five major artificial lakes, thirteen dams, six powerhouses and eighteen electric generating units. The development is located in the rugged High Sierra country approximately 250 miles north of Los Angeles and sixty miles northeast of Fresno.

Redlinger lake was named in honor of David H. Redlinger, former superintendent of the Big Creek development. Redlinger was associated with the project, almost from its beginning in 1911, until he retired from active service in 1947.
