

Navy Douglas A3D Skywarriors Equipped With Landing Chutes

A landing deceleration parachute designed to help reduce rollout of the Navy's largest carrier-based bomber, the Douglas A3D Skywarrior, is now being fitted to all production A3D aircraft, it was announced this week.

Installation of the chutes followed an extensive testing program at Edwards Air Force base carried out jointly by the Douglas company and the U. S. Navy.

The husky 70,000 pound twin jet bomber has low-speed landing characteristics and a Hytrol non-skid braking system that will normally stop it in a short distance. However, addition of the deceleration chute, which measures 24 feet in diameter, will assure safe landings on wet runways, during instrument landings made under GCA conditions, or emergency landings made with high gross weight. The system is designed for normal touchdown speed of 150 knots and an emergency speed of 170 knots.

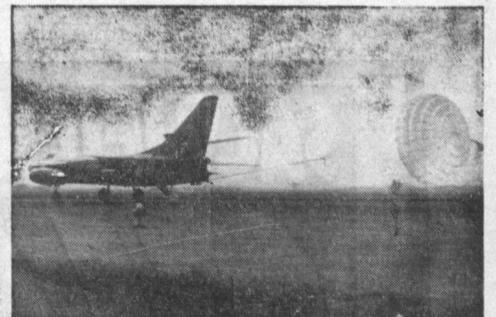

The chute is to be used for landing on airfields only and is not intended for shipboard use.

Housed in the tail section compartment of the airplane, the chute is deployed after touchdown, and is actuated by a single electrical switch controlled by the pilot of the three-man crew. The control system has safety features to prevent release of the chute from occurring too soon, to prevent accidental release, and to permit jettisoning of the chute in an emergency.

The A3D, a long-range, high-altitude bomber, is capable of taking off an aircraft carrier in one ocean, completing a mid-continent bombing mission, and landing on a carrier in another ocean.

Powered by two Pratt and Whitney J-57 turbojet engines, the Skywarrior is rated in the 600-700 mph class, is faster than many jet fighters, and can operate at altitudes in excess of 40,000 feet.

SHOOT THE CHUTE

Silhouetted against a late afternoon sun at Los Angeles International airport, a Douglas Navy A3D Skywarrior rolls to a quick stop after opening its landing deceleration chute. All 3Ds will now be equipped with the new chutes.

Moving Firm To Locate In Torrance

The ground breaking ceremonies for the new Bekins, Van & Storage building were held yesterday. Among those present at the celebration were Miss Torrance (Gaye Wilson), Chamber of Commerce president, John Ebbinghouse and Ed Revo who has been appointed manager of the building.

The building will be located at 22850 Hawthorne Blvd., Torrance.

This Van & Storage building is completely different from all their other buildings, being of a tilt-up type construction with 20,000 square feet.

Another man-saving feature is the palletized fork which lifts up the cargo and transfers cargo to the truck.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Dearborn, of 706D Sartori, announce the birth of a son, Donald Robert, weighing 8 pounds and 14 ounces.
