Harvey Forms New Structural Division

Formation of a new division to engineer, fabricate, and erect aluminum structures has been announced by Harvey Machine Co., Torrance. Appointed to organize Harvey aluminum structures is Dr. J. Morley English, eminent structures authority on leave from the University of California at Los Angeles.

"This is the first time that aluminum structural comparable in size and cost to structural steel (i.e. wide flange beams over 16 inches in depth) have been made available for immediate delivery. The result of years of study and development, aluminum structures are now possible because of Harvey's 8000 and 12,000-ton extrusion presses—presses that rank among the world's largest structural producing equipment," said English.

The structures division will headquarter at the Harvey plant near Los Angeles and will use the metallurgical, production, and fabrication facilities of Harvey Aluminum, a major aluminum producer.

"A special structural engineering department has been created to offer technical assistance to structural engineers, architects, contractors, and builders who want to adapt their structures to aluminum. Our consulting group is ready to demonstrate the new design concepts made practical with aluminum extruded shapes and how to utilize the multiple advantages of the metal," commented English.

Initially, Harvey will engineer and fabricate structural aluminum for bridge structures, monumental signs, power sub-Installations incorporating unusually large spans. Structures are available as bolted units for field erection.

According to English, with aluminum one-third the weight of steel, the advantages of light weight are compounded for movable structures and obviously facilitate the erection of permanent structures. Other advantages offered by aluminum structural include design flexibility, high strength, low-cost maintenance, immediate availability, superior corrosion resistance, and lower foundation costs due to reduced weight.

IT IS more easy to forgive the weak who have injured us, than the powerful whom we have injured. That conduct will be continued by our fears, which commenced in our resentment.—Colton.
