A Better
America
Through
Chemistry

HOMETOWN VIEW OF A REVOLUTION! That's what Torrance citizens are enjoying today. But don't run for cover. The kind of revolution we're talking about is an industrial revolution. A revolution in the methods of manufacturing, a revolution in production of the products so necessary for modern living—a revolution brought about by Chemistry. America's chemical industry offers each of us a better way of life by using the raw materials from our forests, our mineral deposits, the seas around us—even the air itself — and transforming them into our needs.

At the turn of the century when our nation was just emerging from the first industrial revolution, few men would have foreseen the impact of chemical progress on our lives. Indeed, who would have predicted the birth of a new industry that would spend more money on research than any other industry (400 million dollars this year alone) and that out of this research would come a multitude of modern products—clothes made from miracle fibers . . . tires from petroleum . . . durable, livable homes, built without exhausting our natural forest resources . . . drugs and antibiotics that have added 8 full years to our life span.

Facts like these make the 1300 of us who man Shell Chemical Corporation's Torrance plant glad that this week has been designated "Chemical Progress Week," in order that millions of Americans may be reminded of what our industry is doing.

Shell Chemical, now a nationwide company, was born in California in 1929, and the plant here at Torrance is the only western producer of synthetic rubber. We like to feel that as leaders in this new industrial revolution we are serving Torrance, the State of California, and the fast-growing West in an important way.
