INSPECTING BETHLEHEM PLANT

Bethlehem Pacific Coast Steel Plays Host to Press

Officials of Bethlehem Pacific Coast Steel corp. here held open house for newspaper and magazine reporters to show off one of the nation's newest structural steel fabricating facilities.

F. C. Todd, Jr., manager of Bethlehem Pacific's Torrance Works, 2100 West 190th st., played host to the group in the company of E. F. Gohl, Bethlehem Pacific vice-president of Fabricated Steel Construction, San Francisco.

Located on a 30-acre plot; more than three acres are under roof at the Torrance Works, as seen by the visiting press. Latest fabricating equipment, large enough to handle the largest structural steel sections rolled, was seen in action.

Steel beams and girders are cut to desired length, holes for bolts or rivets are punched or drilled in correct places and the component parts are then assembled into the fabricated section ready for installation at the job site.

"Shop fabrication of basic parts, as you have seen, reduces considerably the time needed in the field to erect the frame," Todd told the reporters. "In view of the accelerated rush toward new construction in Southern California, and the part structural steel plays in this rush, fabricating works such as ours here become increasingly important to the Western builder," Todd declared.

During the tour, newsmen witnessed fabrication work on structural steel sections that would later become the frames for such new structures as the IBM and Tidewater Associated office buildings and the new Robinson Pasadena Department store.

Fabrication of the structural steel frame for the new Los Angeles County Hall of Administration, reportedly the largest single construction project ever begun in Southern California, will begin early next year, according to company spokesmen.

VACATION IN HIGH SIERRAS

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Snyder, and children, Bill, Dick and Sharon, 1624 Fern ave., returned recently from a vacation trip to the High Sierras. They were away almost two weeks.

A NEW ADDITION TO THE FAMILY

Starting with today's issue, the classified section of the Torrance Press will make available a new section devoted entirely to classified display, due to the many inquiries we have been receiving.

We feel that this new service will be of mutual benefit both to our readers and our advertisers, since it offers the advantage of pictures and diversified type to the advertiser and ease of finding weekly specials to the reader.
