

With HANK WOLLMAN

Entertainment has many forms in many parts of the world! For example, in Paris it's fine food and fetching femmes... in Las Vegas it's wheels of fortune and whirls of shows, in Hollywood it's theatrics and sport cars... and in the Southland it's dramatic bartenders!

Over at the Roaring 20's where "Bub" Thomas and cronies cavort, there is always a show going on. "Bub," who used to be M.C. at the Colony Club burlesque emporium, may suddenly whip on his monstrous 200 gallon stetson and roar out with the overture to "Oklahoma!" while his partner in crime, Don Nunez, plays the wailing waltz for the tall corn.

At the Vegas Club on Vermont the cast includes the Martellos (Tony, Bob and Fred) and a guy named Joe. Fred plays a "single" afternoons and entertains with songs, dances and folksy stories, while at eventide Tony and Bob liven the tempo with musical solos and intricate soft shufflers. Joe is a stand-in.

Alas, the talents of today are no longer tempted by the glare of the footlights... but by the background of the bottle.

The Far East has influenced American culture in many ways, but not so prominently as in its eating habits. Cantonese and Japanese foods are now a regular fare of the average family and such delicacies as Chicken Teriyaki (Broiled Half Baked Chicken seasoned with a tantalizing sauce) or Mandarin Duck (Boned Pressed Duck flavored with Sweet and Sour sauce and garnished with Chopped Nuts) are now occasional dinnermeats.

At the recent Moscow Music Festival in Gardena, the Kyoto's Sukiyaki restaurant in Gardena and the Tai Song Cantonese-American restaurant in Manhattan Beach, two of the finest restaurants of their kind.
