

Torrance Firm Builds Record Oil Drilling Rig

A Torrance-built National Supply rig was used by Phillips Petroleum Co. today in breaking the world's record for deep drilling. University "EE" Well No. 1, 13 miles east of Fort Stockton, Tex., reached the former record, 22,570 feet, established in Louisiana in 1955, and was heading for greater depths.

The hole broke the Texas state record, 21,687 feet, on April 28. For the job, Phillips selected its Rig 27, a National Supply Type 130 Rig which it has previously used in Alaska. The only unusual piece of equipment was a hydraulic table, developed by Phillips, which is used to cushion the shock caused by stopping the drill pipe as it is being run, and to prevent a squeeze as the extreme weight of pipe is fitted into slips or clamps.
