

CARACAS, BY CRACKY—Students in Hubert Brier's fourth, fifth and sixth grade class at Howard Wood School recently constructed a large relief map of South America, with buttons which light up the capital city of each country. When Brier asked Cleoan McComas to point to the country of which Caracas was the capital, she pointed to Venezuela. Then Peter Zappas pressed the Caracas button and proved she was right. The map also shows the flags and leading products of the countries.

Hi Neighbors Plan Installation at La-Ronde Rue
