Can Your Youngsters Pass These 6 Simple Tests?

- Lie flat on the floor with your hands behind your neck; ask someone to hold your feet, and then roll up into a sitting position.
- Repeat test one, but with your knees bent and your feet on the floor as close as you can comfortably put them to your body.
- Lie flat, as in test number one, and raise your legs to a thirty-degree angle, holding them straight out for ten seconds.
- Lie on your stomach, put a thick pillow under your hips, clasp your hands, and while someone holds your feet, raise your head and chest just off the floor for ten seconds.
- From the same position, have someone hold your chest down, and raise your legs off the floor for ten seconds.
- Bend over and, without bouncing up and down, touch the floor with your fingertips, and hold for three seconds.
