

"Dining With Ron"

By RON BURPO

When we eat in a favorable setting, the food contributes to the physical, mental and emotional well-being of our bodies. Much thought and effect is devoted to food, whether it be from the standpoint of producing it, eating it, or preparing it. A great army of people are involved in the business of food.

Therefore we must take first things first. The first thing we do is find the restaurant that will best meet your needs for that particular evening. Once inside and seated we look over the menu.

Understanding the menu will make eating "out" a greater pleasure. Most menus offer both a la carte and table d'hote meals. A la carte means you may select and dish that you wish and pay for each separate item. The portions are usually larger, however, a complete meal bought this way would be more expensive. Table d'hote is usually listed as either the "luncheon" or "today's special." This means that you pay a set price for the entire meal. The price is often shown besides the main course and includes several courses.
