Wit's End

By CELIA JOYCE

DEAR MISS JOYCE, My husband and I have been married four years. He is a salesman for an oil company, and consequently we travel in this country and the Near East.

Last December our first child was born, and he insisted that we give the baby, a little boy, to his mother to raise. He explained that because of his job we couldn't have a permanent home and the child would have a much better education and home life with his parents. They were very happy to take the child.

I agreed, against my better judgment, at first, but I find myself thinking of my child all the time and wishing for him.

I mentioned my thoughts to my husband, and he flipped. He asked me if I'd rather be a wet nurse than a wife.

—MARIA

DEAR MARIA, It is a common fallacy that a child needs a permanent home. What it does need is the love, affection, attention, and guidance of two parents. If the two parents cannot live in harmony, then it is better the child have one parent.

Judging from the job his mother did on your husband, I wouldn't give her a Billy goat to raise. This guy obviously doesn't want to be bothered with children. This is something you should have ascertained before you took that leap into matrimony.

There is only one answer to so sadistic a question as whether you should be a wet nurse or a wife. You should be both. However, since you have been wet-nursing your husband these many years, it is time to turn your attention to your child. With all the love your helpmeet has for himself, he won't miss yours.

DEAR MISS JOYCE, My boy friend has asked me to marry him, and I want to, badly.

The only trouble is, he makes his living just within the law and sometimes steps outside it. I have told him if he loves me he will change his occupation.

—HELEN

DEAR HELEN, Say I do and join the Mafia.

Sure you want to be gunman's moll and what could be more exciting than chasing down a one-way street in a Cadillac with three police cars following . . . a little bloody sometimes, but it sure beats adult westerns for kicks.

Perhaps this is part of the reason you were attracted to the boy in the first place, a kind of vicarious pleasure in a person who dispenses with the seeming (and often legitimate) stupidities of civilization. But it doesn't make for love and marriage on Blueberry Hill.

Run girl, you can't get that junior Al Capone out of your life fast enough. Even if he agrees to change his profession, don't believe it. His is a sickness that doesn't allow choice.

DEAR MISS JOYCE, "The Country Fair" will be the title of the annual Halldale School dance festival April 29 at the school playground.

All students will participate in the program under direction of the physical education department. Following the festival, coffee and doughnuts will be served by PTA board members.

On May 13 the PTA will sponsor a Halldale Roundup. Featured will be a homemade-pastry booth, a green-thumb booth, and booths selling handmade aprons, slipper socks, toys and pot holders.

Highlight of the event will be a dog-dick act presented by Carl Burgess of Hollywood. Admission will be 25 cents. Other amusements will include a fish pond, darts, and ring throwing. Hot dogs, snow cones, cotton candy, and ice cream bars will be available.

Mrs. W. H. McGuire will portray the clown who allows children to pick her pockets for prizes. Mrs. Max Sals will be in charge of music. PTA members have decided upon an "Old Woman in the Shoe" theme for table decorations and dress when they attend the Lomita-San Pedro Council luncheon May 31 in Long Beach.

Mrs. Jim Garland is decoration chairman.
