ALSTON SHOULD JOIN RIGNEY

No matter how long or how studiously I follow the game of baseball, I sometimes get downright furious over decisions involving personnel changes.

Last week pennant hungry Horace Stoneham of the San Francisco Giants fired hard-working, hard-thinking, and hard-fighting manager Bill Rigney.

To the press the transplanted New Yorker mumbled that "this is not so much a criticism of Rigney's managing as it is a move to lift and inspire the players."

Is Stoneham catering to a hand full of stars who have almost openly shown their resentment of Rigney's way of doing things?

The San Francisco boss got trigger-happy. It's early yet and losing four in a row is certainly no extra valid excuse to bump a man so devoted to winning as Rigney was.

The man who should do like Stoneham is Buzze Bavasi of the Los Angeles Dodgers. His outfit won the pennant and World Series last year. Nevertheless the team is floundering in the second division with virtually the same aggregation of personnel as in '59. What then is Walt Alston doing as skipper of the Dodgers if you follow the Frisco train of thought?

Put Bragan in Charge

Most assuredly I do not condone the Frisco fiasco. Rigney is a darn good man. In the past two years he has made brilliant trades to bolster a team that could only brag about its hitting and maybe one good pitcher. If Stoneham had left well enough alone Rigney would have gotten the Giant cry-babies in a win streak to atone for their showing thus far.

The San Francisco case is over, however. In Los Angeles the Dodger brass seems content with Walter Alston. I am not! I'm sick of the second division and I resent the way Smokey has managed the club during the past home stand.

Like we said before it's early yet. And perhaps Bavasi thinks Alston will start to make the right moves any day now. I don't think so.

I, myself, don't like second guessers. I hate to think I'm one of them. It sounds like it now, however. Regardless, I would rather see Bobby Bragan running the Dodgers now, before its too late to do anything about the pennant chances of the Los Angeles club.

Alston Bench Happy

I have talked with Smokey on numerous occasions this year. I never got intimate with him other than a strict press relation. None the less I believe him to be a capable manager. But not for a team like the Dodgers.

In '59 Alston made the right moves. There was team spirit on the club. This blessed emotion went a long way in favor of Smokey. In many instances he was lucky.

Even in the beginning of the season I evidenced a lack of this thing called spirit. Everything and everyone went about their business in mechanical fashion. Peppery Bobby Bragan also seemed subdued. Did the Dodgers become over-confident? It appears so and if I am right Alston should have done something about it.

Smokey hugs the bench too much. He doesn't (verbally that is) fight hard enough on decisions with the umpires. He's too quiet. In days gone by he could count on many of his ballplayers to do these emotional things for him.

This year Alston has some new key personnel. They need guidance and they are not getting it. Bragan, however, is that type of man. A manager who fights and instills that type of ingredient termed "teaching spirit."

I'm sure that Bragan is just killing time as the Dodgers' third base coach. He's kept still because of his respect for Alston and the Dodger high command. Were he offered the Giant job I'm sure he would turn it down. Eventually he will be the new Dodger manager. The sooner the better.

Richardson to Pitch for City's Post 170

By John Whitacre

A pair of wins by Torrance legion post 170, over the weekend tightened up the Bay League American legion post, to a two way tie between Torrance and South with 4-1 records.

Torrance Post, defeated Lomita 8-6 in a 10 inning affair on Saturday. On Sunday they whipped Hawthorne 8-0 while South Torrance was blanking Redondo 7-0.

In Sunday's Hawthorne game, Tom Richardson notched his fourth win, scattering six hits and fanning 13 batters.

This Saturday, the central team will travel to El Segundo, where Richardson "gundos" Joe Parente. Game time 1:30 at Recreation Park.

South will host hapless Hawthorne, Bob Wrehan will be trying for his fourth victory in as many starts, against Ron Baldwin at the lovely confines of Torrance Park.

Tanner Heads Ascot Meet

Sammy (The Flying Flea) Tanner, Stu Morley, Don Hawley, Bob SirKegian and Troy Lee go out to cut down the flying Al Gunter in Friday evening's motor cycle race meet at Ascot Stadium.

Post time for the first race is 8:30, with time trials starting at 7.

Incidentally, Ascot Stadium, located at 182nd and Vermont Ave., is now more accessible than ever. The Harbor Freeway has been extended to within a mile of the track.

The other handlebar jockeys figure they had better stop Gunter soon or he will build an insurmountable lead in the 1960 race.

Lee, the 1959 Southern California champion, is one rider who figures he's about due. Little Troy has been riding in tough luck all season. Tanner is another who has yet to ride back to his sensational 1959 form.

Preston Petty continues to carve a hot pace in the novice division, with Elliott Schultz his closest pursuer.
